The Indian National Congress is synonymous with broken promises and poor governance. Before every state and national election, the party presents its promises and plans before the people, only to deceive them later, if they form the government.

When they promise a loan waiver, they complain about a lack of funds. The sustainability of every freebie programme they introduce is uncertain, as evident in the states they are currently governing. Fulfilling the new infrastructure needs is a distant dream in the Congress regime, given the ongoing projects are pushed to the backburner indefinitely, resulting in inconvenience for the people.

The one constant about the Congress is their ability to come up with excuses, in case they fail to deliver on their promises. The easiest route to take is to blame the Centre, as evident in Karnataka and Himachal Pradesh today. Unable to match the promises with the state's fiscal health, the Congress attributes its broken promises to the work of the previous regimes, as seen in Telangana.

In the states where they were in power, the standard formula is to make lofty promises before the election, only to forget them later on. In Rajasthan, the Congress healthcare programme was sold to the people with much fanfare, only to leave them disappointed with the implementation.

The broken promises are also a testament to the leadership of the Congress that is without accountability, credibility, or believability. After the elections of 2024, several voters of the Congress queued up before party offices, carrying the fake guarantee cards that promised them Rs. 1,00,000.

Congress has an elaborate history of such broken promises. From Garibi Hatao in the 1970s to the promise of an unemployment allowance in 2024, and from overturning the Supreme Court verdict Shah Bano case in 1985 to promising minorities the first right to India's resources in 2006, Congress has mastered the art of taking the Indian electorate for granted and for a ride.

Congress promises to settle Karnataka's water woes in 5 years if voted to power

FILE: (2013) 2013 (1) 111 (1)

NEW DELHI With a promise to allocate Rs 2 lakh crore to complete every pending irrigation project in the state, Congress in Karnataka is placing its bets on settling the state's water woes in five years, if voted to power. Interestingly, this promise comes on the back of a slew of similar assurances by the ruling BJP to implement irrigating and drinking water projects in the poll-bound state. With three months to go for the assembly polls, the competing parties are focusing in particular on north Karnataka, where the Kalasa-Bandur Nala drinking water project, as well as the Upper Krishna III Stage in the Krishna basin are being seen as two key projects.

Impact of Congress Rule: Ineffectiveness in Delivery or Delivering Failures?

Under Congress rule, the state has seen either a complete lack of delivery on promises or initiatives that, when delivered, result in significant failures. This pattern of inefficiency has led to missed opportunities and a cycle of underperformance, leaving crucial projects either unfulfilled or poorly executed.

Karnataka

- Actual fiscal deficit of Karnataka in 2022-23 was Rs. 46,622 crore and the government has budgeted the fiscal deficit to touch Rs. 82,981 crore for 2024-25.

- In August 2023, the Karnataka government diverted Rs. 11,144 crore from the Scheduled Caste and Tribal Sub-Plans to cover the cost of its five guarantees. State-run KSRTC proposed a 20% bus fare hike after losing ₹295 crore in three

Telangana

- The CAG report stated that Rs 6,225 crore was provided towards the scheme for debt relief to farmers but only an amount of Rs 213 crore was spent.

- Out of Rs 5,000 crore provided towards the construction of two-bedroom houses for the urban poor, only Rs 550 crore was spent.

Himachal Pradesh

- Freebies like a revival of the Old Pension Scheme (OPS), a promise to pay Rs 1,500 to womenfolk, and free power have resulted in a financial mess in Himachal, under a massive debt of Rs 86,589 crore,

- The ballooning fiscal deficit has forced the CM and his ministers to forego their salaries for two months.
